

Jesse Cordray
Public Policy Project Manager

Jesse Cordray became the public policy project manager for Indiana Farm Bureau in April 2023.

His responsibilities include managing INFB's grassroots policy development process. He also is responsible for communicating with the membership and staff on emerging issues, as well as tracking and managing the public policy calendar of events and activities.

He comes to INFB from the Indiana State Department of Agriculture, where he was deputy director of legislative affairs. He also served as press secretary and legislative assistant in the Indiana State Senate, and he held various communications and marketing positions with Klipsch Marketing & Advisors, Pacers Sports & Entertainment and Indiana Public Radio.

He has bachelor's degrees in journalism and telecommunications from Ball State University.

He currently lives in Mooresville with his son, Hudson.

June 2025