

2019 Drainage School

Speaker Biography

Justin Schneider
Indiana Farm Bureau, Inc.

Justin Schneider serves as Director, State Government Relations for Indiana Farm Bureau, Inc. focusing on environmental, natural resource, water and energy issues. He is responsible for the interaction of legal and public policy issues, and implements strategies to achieve Farm Bureau grassroots policy objectives. His primary area of responsibility relates to coordinating strategies with numerous partner agencies and organizations to address agricultural impacts on water quality.

Justin frequently presents legal education programs and provides updates on public policy issues to numerous audiences. Topics include nutrient management, drainage, and environmental regulations. He also has coordinated and presented at numerous continuing legal education programs.

He routinely works with outside counsel in providing insight into resolving issues for their clients with state and federal agencies, as well as developing strategy for litigation.

Justin served as president of the American Agricultural Law Association. He was honored by the AALA in 2015 with its Excellence in Agricultural Law Award in a non-governmental organization. He is a past chair of the Agricultural Law Section of the Indiana State Bar Association. Justin grew up on a grain and livestock farm which now focuses on corn, soybean and hay production.

